Debbie Annette Bible

Debbie Annette Bible, 51, died Wednesday, June 29, 2016, in Bernice, La.

Memorial service was July 3 at Chancellor and Jones Family Funeral Home in Decatur.

Debbie was born July 17, 1964, in Clifton to Charles Augusta Jr. and Louis “Jean” Jackson Bible. She spent her first three years there until the family relocated to Decatur in 1967. Debbie was a member of St. John Missionary Baptist Church and attended Decatur elementary, middle and high schools. In the mid 1980s, she also attended Vogue School of Cosmetology.

Debbie worked on and off through the years as a grocery store attendant, a cook, a housekeeper, caregiver and many other oddsjobs. She loved butterflies and crosses, arts and crafts, painting, jewelry, music – including karaoke – and perfumes. She brought joy to everyone she knew and never met a stranger. Debbie would make you talk to her whether you wanted to or not.

She had a giant smile and bright, expressive eyes that always hinted at mischief, a straight forward manner and the uncanny ability to evoke laughter from anyone, anywhere. She was always the life of the party, the fun person, the family comedian. Debbie exhibited a unique outlook on life. She never got in a hurry for anything and was as slow as Christmas. She was one-of-a-kind.

Debbie was preceded in death by her father; and grandparents Charles Augusta Bible Sr., Esther Oliver Bible and Oran “Jeff” Jefferson. She is survived by her daughters, Laycee Pittman and husband, Neil and Ashtyn Bible; son Cebryn Bible; grandsons Caiden Jennings and Camden Jennings Pittman; granddaughters Samantha Pittman, Madison Pittman and Bailye Pittman, all of Coalgate, Okla.; mother Louis Jean Bible of Decatur; brothers DaLane Bible and wife, Tessa, and Dean Bible Sr., both of Decatur; sisters Darlene Bible of Lake Worth, Darena Kirby and husband, Delbert, of Cedar Hill, Deanna Delgado and husband, Luis, of Decatur and Cyril Bible of Oakland, Calif.; special friend Darin Karch of Spearsville, La.; and uncles, aunts, nephews, nieces, cousins and friends.
